- 1 (a) Andrew owns a factory, and he employs a security guard to protect the building at night. Andrew owes a lot of money to his bank. He decides to set fire to part of his factory and claim the insurance money to clear his debts. He tells no one what he is going to do. Andrew buys several cans of fuel and goes to the factory at night. He turns off the fire alarm system, pours the fuel on the floor and uses it to start a fire. The whole factory is destroyed. Unknown to Andrew, the security guard was at home because he was ill.

Pascal is frightened as Fraser has a reputation for having a bad temper. One night there is no other parking space, so Pascal parks his van outside Fraser's house. Fraser is angry and he paints rude words on the side of the van. Next morning Pascal sees the words on his van but before he can do anything heavy rain washes them away.

Explain how the source material will apply to Fraser. [10]

He bangs a red hockey stick on a table, points it at her, and tells her that he will make her wish she had opened her café somewhere else. The next morning Rana finds that the windows of her café have been broken. A CCTV recording shows Mandeep breaking the windows with a red hockey stick which the police later find in his shop.

Hardman v Chief Constable of Avon and Somerset (1986)

The appellants were part of a group of protestors called the 'Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament Group'. They used soluble paint to paint human silhouettes on the pavement to represent the fortieth anniversary of the bombing in Hiroshima. The paint was specially mixed so it could be washed away by rainwater within a matter of days. Before this could happen, the local authority washed the markings away, sending in a team of cleaners who used high pressure washers to clean the pavement. The protestors were convicted for causing criminal damage and subsequently appealed the decision.

Held: it did not matter that the markings could be washed away, there had been damage nonetheless as there had been expense and inconvenience caused to the local authority.
