ACT ONE

Scene One

DARA (forty-four), in a thin linen tunic, bangs on a huge door. He is half-wild with hunger and exhaustion. It is early 1659, Mughal India.

WATCHMAN: Who's there? DARA: Open up.

5

WATCHMAN: Announce yourself, sir. DARA: Fetch your master.

The WATCHMAN opens a hatch in the door, peers out.

WATCHMAN: Your name, sir?

Silence. 10

I can't hear, you have to shout through this wood, it's such a heavy door.

The WATCHMAN speaks to another SERVANT inside.

He won't give his name.

SERVANT: Why not?

15

WATCHMAN: I don't know.

SERVANT [to DARA, through the door]: Can you tell us who you are, sir?

DARA: Malik Jiwan will know, I am no foe, fetch him.

SERVANT: We can't, sir, without your name.

DARA: Open, will you.

20

WATCHMAN: If we can just take your –

DARA [snaps]: I am not giving it to you, get your master!

SIPIHR, a boy of thirteen, joins DARA.

Without the usual pageant, they want my name. I should have given it, they're not to know it's all I have.

25

Almost laughing at the absurdity of his situation.

Pushing me to pass it through some commonplace door.

SIPIHR: Father...

DARA: Even releasing a lock seems beyond me these days.

SIPIHR: Let's ride on, it's half a day to Persia...

DARA: I know where we are. We need help.

30

35

SIPIHR: Food?

They are both hungry.

DARA: Not just food. Malik has gold to give, Sipihr. We cannot turn up as beggars in Persia, stinking of defeat. They're friends, yes, but still we need a rock a foundation, upon which to build the but still, we need a rock, a foundation, upon which to build the new army.

SIPIHR: DARA: SIPIHR: DARA: SIPIHR:	You trust Malik? I saved his life, Sipihr. But is he trustworthy? What are we jeopardising? There is nothing left to take. There is you that is left to take.	40
	DARA responds more gently.
DARA:	We could all be taken at any moment. We have no choice, we have to stop Aurangzeb, Sipihr, or our Empire will petrify. He is a blinkered bigot.	45
	MALIK speaks through the door, SIPIHR steps back.
MALIK: DARA: MALIK: DARA:	Who's there? Malik Jiwan? What do you want? A harmonious kingdom, a glass of water? It's a difficult question to answer.	50
	The door creaks open.
	I know how I must look.
MALIK: DARA:	Is that Prince Dara? Emperor Dara, according to my father, but he is imprisoned in his own palace. I am Shah Jahan's Crown Prince.	55
	A sudden movement, SIPIHR emerges from the shadows, MALIK slams the door.
MALIK:	Defend!	60
	MALIK's MEN position themselves, armed, behind the door. DARA shouts to be heard.
DARA:	It's my son, Malik Jiwan, my son, Sipihr!
	Slowly the door opens again. DARA ushers SIPIHR forwards.
	The bravest of youths His current garb does not represent his qualities but, which exterior was ever eloquent about the pearl within?	65
SIPIHR: MALIK: DARA: MALIK:	Greetings, Sir Jiwan. Where are your men? All in all we are thirty. Thirty?	70
DARA: MALIK:	The best thirty, the apostles of loyalty. A month ago we were a thousand times that many but, now, are without military escort. Who drives you to this, Prince Dara?	75
DARA: MALIK: DARA:	My brother, Malik Jiwan. Prince Aurangzeb? The same. He has Delhi, and he has Agra Fort surrounded, my father and sister, Jahanara, beyond my care's reach, inside. He uses my home for his family whilst his fast-swelling army	75

MALIK:	hunts us down, baby brother Murad in tow. Aurangzeb claims no interest in the throne, yet he craves it unreservedly, but our father, the Emperor, still lives so I will not let him have it. You have always been brave, Prince Dara.	80
DARA:	It's bluster, Malik Jiwan – part grief, part fear, mostly fury. I am gripped with hatred for Aurangzeb as I have never been for anyone.	85
MALIK: DARA:	God tests you, Prince. And I am ready. We need a night or two under your roof before we march through the Bolan Pass to regroup. We might have reached Persia weeks ago if my wife –	90
	He breaks off.
MALIK:	Your beloved princess?
	SIPIHR steps in to save DARA's emotion from rising.
SIPIHR:	The remainder of our army returned to Lahore with my mother's body.	95
MALIK:	May she rest in peace
SIPIHR:	They buried her next to her Sufi master, Mian Mir's tomb.
DARA:	Digging in the dark like thieves, because we are Aurangzeb's enemies now, no Sufi is safe.
MALIK:	I'm sorry.	100
DARA:	In Ajmer, while we battled, they ransacked our women. The men we paid to guard them took everything – the clothes, the carriages – all they left was the tent in which Nadira relinquished her life. She had no stomach for war. The less one has the closer one is to God, yet this death punches the	105
MALIK:	bliss from me. But here you are at the edge of our Empire. And here we stand talking in the dark. Come in, Prince, you are welcome, welcome.
DARA:	Thank you, Malik Jiwan.
MALIK:	I'd not be here were it not for you, Prince, I'd have been crunched under your father's formidable elephant.	110
	DARA laughs with relief, MALIK joins his laughter.

DARA: Please, let us follow you in.

Scene Two

	AURANGZEB (forty-two) prays in a large tent pitched amongst his army. A girl sings in the background. AURANGZEB, distracted by her, turns to look. His attention is snapped back by MURAD appearing at the entrance to his tent, his AIDE behind him. AURANGZEB greets MURAD warmly.	115
AURANGZEB: MURAD: AURANGZEB:	Brother. Aurangzeb. I'm glad you came, please join me.	120
	MURAD doesn't.
	My man will fetch your man some tea.
	AURANGZEB points outside the tent.
MURAD: AURANGZEB:	He stays. Then we shall have tea brought.	125
	The AIDE stands by the entrance.
	And wine for you, Murad?
	Beat.
MURAD: AURANGZEB: MURAD: AURANGZEB: MURAD:	Are you drinking? We must celebrate, Your Highness How, Your Holiness? You never indulge. In alcohol, no. I like wine more than almost everything.	130
	IMAD, AURANGZEB's secretary, brings MURAD the drinks.	135
AURANGZEB: MURAD: AURANGZEB: MURAD: AURANGZEB: MURAD:	I brought an excellent crate for you, brother. How do you know it's excellent? You must sometimes want the taste in your mouth? Not at all. Did you ever sip it even? No. I could drink all day long.	140
	MURAD drinks, watching AURANGZEB.
	Was it Grandfather Jahangir who put you off?
AURANGZEB: MURAD: AURANGZEB: MURAD:	I don't need a human spectre. 'Two lips, one for drinking, the other for apologising' – know who said that? Grandfather, frequently. When he diluted his rum to slow his decay, he thinned it not with water, as a wise man would, but with wine, confirming that alcohol weakens the intellect. Not as much as opium, admittedly, which Grandfather was famously also partial to but, you saw all that.	145 150

AURANGZEB: MURAD:	I don't remember much. Finished imbibing by late morning, was fast asleep by lunch, propped up on cushions. He drank, his wife ruled. You lived there two whole years.	155
AURANGZEB: MURAD: AURANGZEB: MURAD: AURANGZEB:	I was a child, they weren't important times. Oh, so everything before Father was Emperor is irrelevant? No. I don't remember it anyway. You were an infant. Is the wine good, would you like more?	160
	MURAD finally says what he's been getting at.
MURAD: AURANGZEB:	Why don't you mind that I drink? Because you're a soldier to the core, that's who you are. They don't understand you at Court, they haven't grasped that the worm turned long ago.	165
MURAD: AURANGZEB: MURAD: AURANGZEB: MURAD: AURANGZEB:	I don't need your protection, Aurangzeb, I know what they say and I know what they'll be thinking when they bow to me. They need to look in your eyes to see the boldness. My Timur blood. Stronger in you, Murad, than in the rest of us put together. It's worth remembering that, Aurangzeb. More?	170
AUTANOZEB.	AURANGZEB pours wine.	175
MURAD: AURANGZEB: MURAD:	Why did you rush ahead? Why did you stay behind? You – [Continuing his next speech, fighting to be heard over
AURANGZEB MURAD	AURANGZEB.] [overlapping]: The astrologers said it was auspicious to forge forwards, we had to respond quickly – [overlapping]: You made me question our arrangement. We were fighting side by side and suddenly, without warning, my	180
AURANGZEB: MURAD AURANGZEB:	men were at the back like sheep. I am impatient to deliver you to Delhi, brother, to have your name emblazoned on the coins. You got my letters? [still suspicious]: I got three. Murad, you are perfectly ripe, the Indian Empire is thirsty for this change.	185
	MURAD cuts to the chase.	190
MURAD: AURANGZEB: MURAD:	Why not you, what stops you from ruling? I am not a king. But whilst I wish my brother well I will not sit back and watch Dara take the throne. Because he would dissipate our religion?	105
AURANGZEB: MURAD: AURANGZEB:	Dilute and dissipate, his religious observance is lax. And mine is not? You do not spend your days writing mystical poetry.	195
	MURAD can't help but smirk.

MURAD: His soldiering is lax too. He indicates himself and AURANGZEB. 200 We two were sent out to wrestle our corner, and look what we've both built up! I know how to lead, like our Timurid ancestors. Being closeted in the fort, Dara imagines everyone springs from the same happy fount. AURANGZEB: He melds. 205 Did you see his soldiers? That wasn't an army, it was a MURAD: collection of bakers and cobblers with swords. Do you know, when he writes, he still addresses me as baby brother? AURANGZEB: I serve my Empire by placing an Emperor I believe in on the Peacock Throne. I trust you, brother, I serve you well in this 210 war. MURAD helps himself to wine. MURAD: The people of Delhi adore Dara. He throws them money, of course they love him. AURANGZEB: Can I trust you, Aurangzeb? 215 MURAD: I swear that I am working, in your best interests, to deliver what AURANGZEB: our Empire most needs. You at its helm. Why don't you stay? [to MURAD'S AIDE]. He's perfectly safe. AIDE: I'll stay if you don't mind, sir. AURANGZEB: Of course. [To MURAD.] Sleep well, Your Highness. 220 AURANGZEB leaves. Scene Three DARA and SIPIHR emerge, clean and rested. MALIK is with them. DARA: I cannot thank you enough, Malik Jiwan. Gather a strong army, may your desires come true. 225 MALIK: DARA: They will, Malik, on the back of your charity. We already had him, nearly, at Samugarh, thanks to Sipihr. MALIK [to SIPIHR]: See your father's pride? This one galloped his whole ten thousand into Aurangzeb's DARA: flanks and broke them. 230 MALIK: Good boy. DARA: Then in a second of confusion, my general urged me down from my elephant. 'You'll be nimbler on a horse!', he shouts. My soldiers, seeing my empty howdah, think I've been killed. That moment, Aurangzeb sounds the victory drum so my 235 soldiers panic. A hot wind picked up and the day turned. Do you know what Aurangzeb had done? MALIK: No. DARA: Paid my loyal general a hundred thousand rupees to get me down from my howdah. 240 MALIK: That is underhand. That is Aurangzeb's warfare. DARA: MALIK: Next time, Dara, may the day be yours.

A storm of SOLDIERS arrives.

DARA: 245 Sipihr, run, we are betrayed, run, boy, run!

SIPIHR escapes, SOLDIERS grab DARA.

MALIK: After him, quickly.

Two SOLDIERS follow SIPIHR, shouting.

SOLDIER ONE: Go that way, get him!

SOLDIER TWO: I am! 250

DARA: Never stop running, Sipihr!

He turns to MALIK.

Is this the colour of your gratitude, peddling me to my brother as soon as I'm past your walls?

MALIK: Forgive me, Prince, it is unsafe to be on the loser's side.

DARA: You are the loser, Malik. With a heart that corrupt, what hope is there for your soul?

DARA is marched off.

Scene Four

AURANGZEB's tent, MURAD sleeps. AURANGZEB appears.

He whispers.

260

255

AURANGZEB: Officer?

MURAD'S AIDE is sleepy but awake.

AIDE: Sir?

AURANGZEB: I need some advice.

> The AIDE is flattered. 265

A visitor came looking for your master, come tell me if you know him.

As soon as the AIDE steps outside, he is garrotted by AURANGZEB's MEN. Two more MEN come for MURAD. 270

Quietly, they remove his weapons and lock his feet together.

MURAD wakes.

MURAD: What are you doing? Not this, no, no... Aurangzeb!

There is a struggle.

AURANGZEB: The fetters are golden, Murad. It is for your own benefit.

MURAD: Where are my men? 275

AURANGZEB: He was the last. The rest are on my payroll already, baby brother.

Scene Five

In Agra Fort, SHAH JAHAN rails against a letter.

JAHANARA: SHAH JAHAN:	Is he coming here? Aurangzeb hasn't the decency to face me, sending me orders from Delhi! Incompetent to rule, how dare he? I'd sooner grind my pearls to dust than give them to him.	280
	He wears a string of enormous pearls.
	Common property indeed!
JAHANARA:	He wants it all, Baba, your place on the throne and everything that goes with it.	285
SHAH JAHAN:	I am not finished yet, and when the time comes, I have chosen
JAHANARA:	my successor. You know it never unfolds like that, Baba, every one of your	200
SHAH JAHAN:	sons is a contender. What are you saying, Jahanara, I should have killed the others	290
JAHANARA:	off? No, Baba, but this war, all those lives it's insatiable. To secure Dara as Emperor, the others needed to be managed, somehow.	295
SHAH JAHAN:	Without bloodshed, how?
	JAHANARA can't answer.
	What can we do from here?
JAHANARA: SHAH JAHAN: JAHANARA:	Wait, is all. As ever. Until Dara returns to march on Aurangzeb. We don't even know where Dara is, he may be months away,	300
SHAH JAHAN:	how can we know? The little white snake, it's not enough to have me trapped here like a bear, Aurangzeb wants my fort, he knows the jewels I have in my cellars.	305
JAHANARA:	Stop it, Baba, what can you offer? Send Aurangzeb something, create time for us to think.	303
SHAH JAHAN:	A glass of poison, humanity in his soul? Look what he is doing to me!
JAHANARA:	And what did you do to your own kin when you were in Aurangzeb's position, your surviving brother, your nephews and cousins? Family blood had not been shed on accession before you, Baba.	310
	SHAH JAHAN is sobered by this.
SHAH JAHAN: JAHANARA: SHAH JAHAN:	What about your sword? Alamgir, you mean Alamgir? Yes, Alamgir, that would please him. It is a sword built for an Emperor, it is mine!	315
JAHANARA: SHAH JAHAN: JAHANARA:	I know, Baba, but we have to work with him, not against him. What if Dara comes? Then everything would change.	320

Scene Six

Red Fort, Delhi. AURANGZEB is presented with Alamgir.

ROSHANARA: A sword?

AURANGZEB: The blade he's always used.

ROSHANARA: The one we weren't allowed to touch as children? 325

AURANGZEB: You can touch it now.

ROSHANARA: May I hold it?

AURANGZEB: Yes, but don't drop it.

ROSHANARA: I won't, Seizer of the Universe.

AURANGZEB: Stop it, Roshanara. 330

She laughs.

What's funny? That is the sword's name, not mine.

ROSHANARA: But it will be yours. Murad is captured, Dara is captured, Father is confined.

AURANGZEB tries to laugh too. 335

What does he want?

AURANGZEB: He's buying time for Dara, as ever.

ROSHANARA: Then he's spending money in an empty shop.

IMAD enters, bows deeply.

IMAD: My lord, Prince Dara is a day away. 340

AURANGZEB: Fine, good. Imad?

IMAD: Yes, Sire.

AURANGZEB: Before they enter Delhi, they must change elephants.

IMAD: Yes, Sire.

AURANGZEB: You know Babita? 345

IMAD: Babita is sick, Sire.

AURANGZEB: So I hear. I want Dara to ride in on that elephant, just as she is.

And Sipihr?

IMAD: No news as yet, Sire.

AURANGZEB: Once Dara is here, I will watch from the upper walls. 350

IMAD nods and goes. ROSHANARA hands back the sword.

ROSHANARA: What must Dara be thinking?

AURANGZEB: He deserves every thought. Humiliation is new to him, he's still sticky with our mother's milk.

ROSHANARA: Father should watch, and Jahanara, can't you bring them from 355

Agra?

AURANGZEB: I do not have access to them yet. And anyway, his days of appearing in public are over.

ROSHANARA: So Father will end his days in a fort the size of a walled city?

AURANGZEB: In the harem of Agra Fort, I will limit him to that section as soon 360 as we can -

ROSHANARA interrupts AURANGZEB with a laugh.

ROSHANARA: The women's quarters, how fitting! AURANGZEB: Roshanara, you need to control yourself, it is not apposite to 365 interrupt an Emperor. ROSHANARA: I'm sorry, Your Highness. AURANGZEB: Allow me to offer you some wisdom - the key to conquering the self lies in restraint. ROSHANARA: I apologise, please continue. AURANGZEB: My plan is to lock Father in his own harem as soon as we gain 370 ROSHANARA: Why don't you just attack, go in? And destroy those towering walls, which are now mine? AURANGZEB: You need him to surrender, beg for mercy. ROSHANARA: AURANGZEB: Once he has realised he cannot hold the fort for ever... 375 But that could take months! How much food do they have? ROSHANARA: AURANGZEB: The kitchens are full. ROSHANARA: So as long as they have water and enough to eat... An idea arises for AURANGZEB. What? Oh. 380 He summons IMAD. AURANGZEB: Imad? Fetch Shaista Khan. IMAD bows and leaves. ROSHANARA understands AURANGZEB's thinking. You can drive them out with thirst. 385 ROSHANARA: Scene Seven In Agra, JAHANARA interrogates AFIA, an Imperial lady-inwaiting. JAHANARA: The pipes cannot all be empty, try the bathing rooms again! AFIA: They're dry, my lady, all of them, dry. Everything is lost if there is no water, we cannot cook, we 390 JAHANARA: cannot drink, we cannot pray! Emperor Aurangzeb must know this, my lady. AFIA: How could he? Are you not scared to die, Afia? JAHANARA: Not yet, my lady. AFIA: JAHANARA: Whv? 395 AFIA: Because I trust that you will leave the fort and beg your brother, on your father's behalf, for water. What else can I do, Afia? JAHANARA: AFIA: I think Emperor Aurangzeb must know this too, my lady. He understands you have no option. 400 JAHANARA: Your deaths would be on my hands - my father's, yours, your children's... of course I must go begging. I know he knows, he has us all now.

ACT TWO

Scene One

The past.

	JAHANARA gives way to her younger self, YOUNG JAHANARA (fourteen). She is joined by YOUNG ROSHANARA (eleven). It is thirty years earlier, 1629, the Red Fort, Delhi. There is drumming from the Drum Room. A SLAVE GIRL sweeps the great hall with a brush of branches, a MALE SERVANT, squatting, cleans between the floor tiles. Swallows swoop and twitter through the open hall. An IMPERIAL SLAVE rushes through. The girls follow. She stops them.	405 410
IMPERIAL SLAVE:	Not yet.
	She goes.	415
YOUNG ROSHANARA: YOUNG JAHANARA: YOUNG ROSHANARA:	She just has baby after baby. They are your brothers and sisters, Roshanara. Each one makes her weaker, even when the baby doesn't live!
YOUNG JAHANARA: YOUNG ROSHANARA: YOUNG JAHANARA: YOUNG ROSHANARA:	What do you suggest, she stops having children? There are enough of us already, aren't there? Roshanara! You know what's going to happen if she dies, don't you?	420
YOUNG JAHANARA: YOUNG ROSHANARA: YOUNG JAHANARA: YOUNG ROSHANARA: YOUNG JAHANARA:	I can't believe you just said that. Everybody dies, even Emperor's wives. You need to be quiet. You'll be in charge, First Lady of the Empire, you'll make all the decisions and everyone will forget about me. Don't talk to me when you're in this mood.	425
	YOUNG ROSHANARA plumps herself down on a large cushion.	430
YOUNG ROSHANARA:	I was going to sit there, I'm tired. Go to sleep then.
	YOUNG ROSHANARA moves.
YOUNG JAHANARA: YOUNG ROSHANARA: YOUNG JAHANARA:	I wish they'd bring news. It's probably another girl. Why are you smiling? Because babies are adorable. Not like you, grumpy, what's the matter?	435
YOUNG ROSHANARA: YOUNG JAHANARA: YOUNG ROSHANARA: YOUNG JAHANARA:	I'm bored! Shall I call the tutor, ask for more lessons? No! Get your sewing out.	440
YOUNG ROSHANARA: YOUNG JAHANARA: YOUNG ROSHANARA: YOUNG JAHANARA: YOUNG ROSHANARA:	I don't want to sew! It always feels this way when we have to wait. It wouldn't if we were boys. What would you do if you were a boy?	445

YOUNG JAHANARA: YOUNG ROSHANARA: YOUNG JAHANARA: YOUNG ROSHANARA: YOUNG JAHANARA: YOUNG ROSHANARA: YOUNG JAHANARA:	Sometimes.	450
	I'm glad we can't. If you have boys they grow up more powerful than you, with girls they end up hating you. I don't hate Ami!	455
YOUNG ROSHANARA: YOUNG JAHANARA:	Have you met someone? Where? We never get the chance. Though that might change when Dara is Emperor. Have you?	460
YOUNG ROSHANARA: YOUNG JAHANARA:	What? Met someone?
	YOUNG ROSHANARA looks away.
YOUNG ROSHANARA:	I don't believe it, Roshanara, how, you're eleven years old? You're fourteen, catch up.	465
	ITBAR, a eunuch, comes in with an infant's jacket.
ITBAR: YOUNG ROSHANARA: YOUNG JAHANARA: ITBAR:	Girl's talk, Itbar. Am I not a girl? Well, you're a eunuch Do you want to be a girl? Not really.	470
	YOUNG JAHANARA jokes with ITBAR, they are easy and familiar.
YOUNG JAHANARA:	Well then, you're a man and can't join our conversation!
	The boys run in. As they pass the water, YOUNG DARA (thirteen) splashes YOUNG AURANGZEB (eleven).	475
YOUNG AURANGZEB: YOUNG DARA: YOUNG AURANGZEB ITBAR:	Don't, Dara! What did I do? [to ITBAR]: He splashed me! Calm down, boys.	480
	YOUNG AURANGZEB shows his wet patches.
YOUNG AURANGZEB: YOUNG DARA: YOUNG AURANGZEB:	Look. [to DARA.] You always do this when Father's coming. You're always so serious when Father's coming. No, I'm not! YOUNG ROSHANARA splashes YOUNG DARA. He, in	485 good humour, splashes her back.
YOUNG ROSHANARA: YOUNG DARA: YOUNG ROSHANARA:	I'm a better aim than you. Would you like my jacket?
	YOUNG DARA points to the jacket ITBAR is holding.	490

YOUNG DARA: Take Murad's, wear your baby brother's jacket!

YOUNG AURANGZEB: Would you like mine, Roshanara?

YOUNG ROSHANARA doesn't listen, she splashes YOUNG

DARA again.

ITBAR: Roshanara! 495

YOUNG ROSHANARA: What?

YOUNG DARA and YOUNG ROSHANARA laugh, YOUNG AURANGZEB is deadly serious. SHAH JAHAN enters. The girls run to him, anxious for news.

SHAH JAHAN: Gather round. 500

YOUNG JAHANARA: Baba?

YOUNG ROSHANARA: What's happened, Father?

SHAH JAHAN: We have a song to prepare, all the way from France, it's for your mother. Who can tell me where France is?

YOUNG DARA: It's close to that little island... 505

YOUNG JAHANARA: The British Isles.
SHAH JAHAN: And the monarch?
YOUNG JAHANARA: King Charles.

SHAH JAHAN: No, petal, he rules the little isles, who rules France?

A SERVANT enters, SHAH JAHAN looks at him. 510

SERVANT: Excuse me, Your Excellency, a faqir is here.

SHAH JAHAN: Did he bring anything with him? SERVANT: He did, Sire, he is carrying fruit.

SHAH JAHAN: What kind of fruit?

SERVANT: Apples, Sire. 515

SHAH JAHAN: Then show him in.

The SERVANT goes out backwards, never turning his back on the Emperor. The girls cover their faces with veils.

King Louis the XIII.

YOUNG DARA: Ah, Louis the Just! 520

The SERVANT returns with a young FAQIR with long uncovered hair and very little on. He holds apples.

SHAH JAHAN: Two red apples. How?

FAQIR: Trees, my lord.

SHAH JAHAN: Which trees? 525

FAQIR: They are invisible to some eyes.

SHAH JAHAN: If there's one thing I've learnt as Emperor it's to disregard a pregnant lady's wishes at your peril. My wife yearns for apples. I've had every tree in Kashmir investigated, the entire region, nothing is in season, and yet you arrive with two shiny apples.

He takes the apples.

Where is your tree?

FAQIR: Oh, it is not my tree, Sire.

	He giggles.	535
SHAH JAHAN: FAQIR: SHAH JAHAN: FAQIR:	I possess nothing but what you see me in. Yet you bring more than gold. I'm glad. May I ask you a question, Sire? Go on. Smell your hands.	540
	SHAH JAHAN sniffs his palms.
SHAH JAHAN: FAQIR:	What do they smell of? Apples, the distinct smell of these beautiful fruits. Whenever you suffer ill-health, Sire, inhale the odour from your hands. If you still smell the scent of apples, you have longer to live, when you cease to smell apples, your life has reached its term.	545
	There is a shift of tone for SHAH JAHAN, he now takes this FAQIR very seriously.
SHAH JAHAN: FAQIR: SHAH JAHAN:	Will it be sickness, Faqir, will I die a natural death? I cannot tell that, Sire, I only see what I see. Which is more than you say. I charge you, a question, which son of mine, born or unborn, will destroy my bloodline?	550
FAQIR: SHAH JAHAN: FAQIR:	I'm sorry, Sire? Answer. That is unfair to ask, Sire, and with two of your sons present	555
SHAH JAHAN: FAQIR: SHAH JAHAN:	Nonetheless, it is the question I pose. They are just boys. They are princes, princes have ears of flint, answer the question, I command you.	560
FAQIR: SHAH JAHAN:	What if I were wrong, Sire? You could lie to me or you could tell me what you see, but if you do neither you will not live beyond sundown.
FAQIR: SHAH JAHAN:	The middle of your living sons, the one with pale skin. Aurangzeb?	565
	The children look at each other.
FAQIR: SHAH JAHAN:	I beg you, Sire, please don't Come here, Aurangzeb.
	YOUNG AURANGZEB steps forward.	570
YOUNG AURANGZEB: SHAH JAHAN: YOUNG AURANGZEB: SHAH JAHAN:	Did you hear what this Faqir said? Yes, Father. Are you going to destroy me one day, boy, well? No, Father. You had better not, you little snake, do you hear?	575
	YOUNG JAHANARA tries to break the intensity.
YOUNG JAHANARA:	Why would l?

You better had not.

SHAH JAHAN:

	[To a SERVANT.] Take these apples to my wife, give them to her ladies, run.	580
	The SERVANT bows, takes the apples and leaves, running backwards. SHAH JAHAN smells his hands.
FAQIR: SHAH JAHAN: FAQIR:	I have always counted on the planets, my court astrologers, for glimpses of the future, but here I am told my fortune by a Sufi faqir, an all-seeing mendicant. Not that, Sire I don't know what sort of magic it is you practise, but I am grateful. No magic, your lordship, I didn't mean to misguide you. I follow the path of love, a road which continually sheds light on what we see and on our destinies.	585 590
	He speaks mainly for YOUNG AURANGZEB.
SHAH JAHAN FAQIR: SHAH JAHAN:	Every one of us, can open our fate up, like a flower, lift up to the sun and broaden our way. [to FAQIR]: Don't leave without filling your purse. I have no need of money, Sire. No? Food, then.	595
FAQIR: SHAH JAHAN FAQIR:	Nor food, Sire, thank you. [to SERVANT]: He wants for nothing, show him out. Goodbye, children of the Empire, forgive my imprudence. Remember that rock is the same as a jewel, the only difference being, the latter holds light.	600
	The FAQIR leaves with SERVANT, backwards.
YOUNG DARA: SHAH JAHAN: YOUNG DARA: YOUNG AURANGZEB:	Who was he, Father, who was that faqir? I met him on the mosque steps. How can Sufis see like that? See what?	605
YOUNG DARA: YOUNG AURANGZEB: YOUNG ROSHANARA: YOUNG DARA: SHAH JAHAN:	Everything. They see nothing, nothing! He didn't even have clothes on! Clothes are irrelevant. 'The best garment is the garment of righteousness.' Now, this is King Louis's favourite song, about the birth of a child,	610
ALL THE CHILDREN: SHAH JAHAN	ready? Yes, Father. [singing]: D'où viens-tu, bergère? D'où viens-tu?	615
	With me, go.	620

SHAH JAHAN [singing]: J'ai vu un miracle Ce soir arrivé. 635 SHAH JAHAN and CHILDREN [singing]: J'ai vu un miracle Ce soir arrivé. He sets up a simple dance step for them to do as they sing. 640 SHAH JAHAN [singing]: Qu'as-tu vu, bergère? Qu'as-tu vu? They all sing and do the dance step. ITBAR joins in, making MURAD's jacket dance. 645 SHAH JAHAN and CHILDREN [singing]: Qu'as-tu vu, bergère? Qu'as-tu vu? SHAH JAHAN: 650 Step back, Aurangzeb. YOUNG AURANGZEB looks confused. You're out of time. [Singing.] J'ai vu dans la crèche 655 Un petit enfant. Singing and stepping. SHAH JAHAN and CHILDREN [singing]: J'ai vu dans la crèche 660 Un petit enfant. SHAH JAHAN [to ITBAR]: Take him to the courtyard or, wherever his baby brother is. ITBAR: Yes, Sire. YOUNG AURANGZEB is devastated. ITBAR takes YOUNG AURANGZEB off. 665 SHAH JAHAN [singing]: Sur le paille fraîche Mis bien tendrement.

The others sing, but YOUNG ROSHANARA drops out.

Scene Two

The past.

	A burst of flames. Fifteen years later, 1644. YOUNG JAHANARA gives way to JAHANARA, who is bundled off. ITBAR and the FAQIR are mid-thirties, speaking in hushed, hurried tones.	710
FAQIR: ITBAR:	It was a lamp which set the Princess alight? In the passageway, it wasn't properly in its alcove, her dress went up like kindling. Two slave girls died trying to smother the flames.	715
FAQIR: ITBAR:	Poor children. The Emperor throws doctor after doctor at her, local, foreign, now you.	720
FAQIR: ITBAR:	If I can be of any service Princess Jahanara will live or die, we cannot influence which, it's Shah Jahan who needs help. Losing his wife, Mumtaz, nearly slew him, were Jahanara to go too he would crawl to
FAQIR:	his grave. He mews like a kitten by her side. His children are gathering, young Murad arrived from Punjab last night. Is Aurangzeb…?	725
ITBAR:	Not here yet. Dara has been at her bedside, along with their father, since the accident. No apples today?
FAQIR: ITBAR:	There was no request for fruit. Next time you're summoned, in another fifteen years, His Majesty's favourite is watermelon and he's partial to a mango.	730
FAQIR: ITBAR:	How quickly fifteen years passes. Let's go.
	They head off. ITBAR speaks as they leave.	735
	Just to warn you, her wounds go through muscle and fat to bone, her left arm is under question – should they or shouldn't they amputate?
	ROSHANARA (twenty-six) hurries in.
ROSHANARA: ITBAR	Has the ice arrived? [to FAQIR]: Excuse us, slaves fetch a daily supply from the mountains, my lady is concerned with their tardiness.	740
ROSHANARA: ITBAR: ROSHANARA:	Are you being disrespectful, Itbar? My lady? Tell me as soon as it gets here.	745
	She hurries off.	, , , ,
ITBAR	[to the FAQIR]: Eager to prove what a fine First Lady she would make.
FAQIR: ITBAR:	Has the Emperor stopped his building work? The Taj Mahal? A week of inactivity, but the rain is coming so they are back at it now. They have to waterproof it, which means immersing each and every brick in scalding fat.	750
FAQIR: ITBAR:	That must be costly. Mustn't it?

	AURANGZEB (twenty-seven) arrives, fresh from his travels.	755
AURANGZEB:	Where is my sister?
ITBAR:	Prince Aurangzeb, welcome home.
AURANGZEB:	Thank you, Itbar. What is this fagir doing here?
FAQIR:	Sire, I am happy to see you.
AURANGZEB:	Did Father summon him?	760
ITBAR:	He did, Sire.	, 00
AURANGZEB:	Send him home.
	[To the FAQIR.] We do not want you here.
	FAQIR doesn't know what to do.
FAQIR:	It may be polite to wait and see your father –	765

DARA:	Brother, when did you arrive?
	•
AURANGZEB	[bowing to SHAH JAHAN]: Your Highness.
DARA:	Why don't I show you to my apartments, you can freshen up.
AURANGZEB:	I'd feel safer in an apartment of my own.
SHAH JAHAN:	Safer?	775
DARA:	You have rooms of your own within mine, our section of the fort is newly built, it's secure.
AURANGZEB:	I see you've ploughed funds into your building works, Father? I

SHAH JAHAN:	How dare you travel all this distance to pour insidious	780 allegations on your family! Unsafe in your own brother's home?
AURANGZEB:	I came to see my sister.
SHAH JAHAN:	The fire was three weeks ago.
AURANGZEB:	It's the first invitation in eight years that you have extended to
	me.	785
SHAH JAHAN:	You have been engaged in other business.
AURANGZEB:	I have, and the Deccan thrives under my leadership.
SHAH JAHAN:	So do its mango trees, which you have kept close.
AURANGZEB: SHAH JAHAN:	I have sent the fruits of every crop! Do you think I don't know? You keep the best for yourself.	790
AURANGZEB:	I would like to see my sister now.	790
DARA:	She is sleeping
SHAH JAHAN	[to AURANGZEB]: You will pay for this haughty and ridiculous attitude, how dare you mistrust us? Take off your sword.
AURANGZEB:	Why?	795
SHAH JAHAN:	I am stripping you of office, off!
DARA:	Father
SHAH JAHAN:	You are no longer in charge of the Deccan. Ex-viceroy.
	AURANGZEB takes off his sword.
DARA:	He did not mean to offend, Father	800
AURANGZEB:	If ousting a conspiracy for fratricide is offensive then so be it.	330

SHAH JAHAN:	Fratricide?

AURANGZEB strides off. FAQIR follows him, while speaking to SHAH JAHAN.

FAQIR: Your Majesty, do you mind if I speak with your son? 805

AURANGZEB: I do not want to see you ever again!

FAQIR: Let me talk with you, Sire...

AURANGZEB: You should have been killed a decade ago!

SHAH JAHAN: Never trust a snake in the grass.

DARA: Aurangzeb, come home with me, see the family. 810

FAQIR tries to speak to AURANGZEB.

FAQIR: It was wrong to say what I saw, I should have chosen death.

AURANGZEB: I wish you had! DARA: Aurangzeb...

AURANGZEB: God will know our hearts! 815

Scene Three

We are back in 1659. JAHANARA and SHAH JAHAN are led to a small room at the top of the harem tower of Agra Fort. They are more simply dressed.

SHAH JAHAN: Dara behind bars!

ITBAR: It will be me looking after things for you now. 820

SHAH JAHAN removes his jewels and hands them to ITBAR. ITBAR gives them to a SERVANT, who carries them off.

SHAH JAHAN [bitterly]: How comforting, to have an old friend as jailor. Spit it out, then, Itbar, don't spare the details.

ITBAR: I never saw a greater crowd, Sire, not even on your coronation. 825

There were no flowers left in the marketplace, not a bloom, every rooftop was crammed, all thirsting for a glimpse of the broken Prince.

JAHANARA: Is Dara broken, Itbar?

ITBAR: As he passed, his petite elephant lumbering her scabbed feet 830 through the fetid streets, they roared their outrage from those roofs and windows, every shadowy corner, 'Dara, Dara, set Dara free!' The elephant's legs shook with every step, she'd not been washed in weeks.

SHAH JAHAN: Oh, Aurangzeb! 835

ITBAR: You would have been warmed by the weeping, Sire, as your people saw their hopes of Prince Dara replacing you, recede. The soothsaying Faqir, who once brought you apples, danced, half-naked, intoning, 'Today is Dara's coronation, Emperor

840

Dara is carried to his throne!'

SHAH JAHAN: If only!

ITBAR: Then the whole crowd crooned, many thousands, all different religions, 'Emperor Dara, Emperor Dara!' He inspired unity if nothing else.

JAHANARA: And Dara? 845

ITBAR: Like a snapped twig, ma'am, without the will to even lift his I knew it. I felt it. JAHANARA: How can a brother do this? SHAH JAHAN: JAHANARA: Where is he now? 850 In a cell under the Red Fort. ITBAR: SHAH JAHAN: He has to be freed, I cannot bear to sit here like a stuffed ITBAR: How irritating to be confined, Sire, after so many years of liberty, but your tower is pleasant, one of the peaks in what was 855 once your fort. I know you are concerned about the cellars, with their coffers of gold and silver, but at least you can enjoy the view of your Taj Mahal. Stop it, Itbar, for old times' sake. JAHANARA: ITBAR: I am conceding, simply, that it is considerate of Emperor 860 Aurangzeb to offer an outlook onto the very beautiful monument you created. SHAH JAHAN: I can barely see it. Why is everything being obliterated, my Empire, my eyes, my son? You are all there is left, petal, and soft as dew you are, fruit of my tree. 865 I know. Father. JAHANARA: SHAH JAHAN: Leave us, Itbar. I'm sorry, Sire? ITBAR: SHAH JAHAN: Leave us, please, can't you? [taking his leave]: Of course, Sire. I may be your jailor but I can 870 ITBAR still take instruction, for old times' sake. He goes. SHAH JAHAN looks out of the window. SHAH JAHAN: It all looks mauve to me. JAHANARA: It's dusk now, Baba, it's all I see too. SHAH JAHAN: I intended for it to last. 875 JAHANARA: It is lasting. SHAH JAHAN: Not wither and die. He looks bitterly towards the Taj. It proved to be merely the shadow of a woman who died too 880 young. JAHANARA: Some shadow, Baba, twenty thousand workers labouring seventeen years for your wife. It's a physical poem and you know it, the most exquisite monument ever. A ghost, is all. Spectre-white against the red of life. Its towers SHAH JAHAN: are spindly arms outstretched to our children, to me. The arch 885 in the middle is mine, all mine, welcoming me to her inner self, so intricate and wise. Imposing yet contained. She sprang to life when you broached her, you see, vivid curls of green tendrils and blood-red flowers. She stood sentry to our lives, look at those lives now. I see nothing of it, Jahanara, just a 890 mid-distance smear.

She poses for him, slightly reluctant.

Stand by the light, let me look.

You see me, don't you?

JAHANARA:

SHAH JAHAN:

JAHANARA: SHAH JAHAN: JAHANARA:	I miss her so much. I know. I held my softness for her. Yes, Baba. And some for me.	895
	Scene Four
	The throne room of the Red Fort, Delhi. There is a sense of urgency. AURANGZEB paces, his COURTIERS await instruction. ROSHANARA, half-veiled, is with the COURTIERS. AURANGZEB indicates for her to leave.	900
AURANGZEB: ROSHANARA: AURANGZEB:	Roshanara. I thought I might add my voice to the debate? You think it's your place?	905
ROSHANARA:	ROSHANARA shrugs. When I want you, I will invite you. Go. I will be all ears.
	AURANGZEB dismisses her. She goes behind the screen.
AURANGZEB: DANISHMAND:	Gentlemen? If I may, Your Highness, yes, the crowd is excitable – they know he's in your dungeons – but once he's moved off the premises, Prince Dara will become history.	910
AURANGZEB: SHAISTA KHAN:	Khan? Sire, that crowd is peopled with Hindus, Christians, Jews, Yogis, Atheists these are Dara's supporters, not men with power in this city – where are the aristocrats, where are the mullahs? I didn't see them out there throwing flowers.	915
	MULLAH FAROOQ mutters.
MULLAH FAROOQ: SHAISTA KHAN:	I should hope not. It is the homeless, the students, the artists, of course they are overexcited, it is their nature to be so.	920
AURANGZEB: SHAISTA KHAN:	The streets are full. I don't deny the rabble is large, Sire. They are curious too. What I am saying is that, as Danishmand suggests, it is a transient outburst, certainly not a threat to your reign.	925
AURANGZEB: SHAISTA KHAN:	And your view on him staying in our dungeons? It signifies a clear throne. You can begin proceedings for an elaborate and highly visible coronation. I think it is crucial to trumpet a confident start to your reign, Sire, having acceded so hastily and quietly all those weeks ago.	930
	ROSHANARA appears.
AURANGZEB: ROSHANARA: SHAISTA KHAN:	Roshanara, what is it? I wanted to tell you, Sire, that Malik Jiwan has been attacked by the crowd. Malik Jiwan?	935
AURANGZEB:	They hate him for handing Dara over. What happened?

© UCLES 2020 0411/12/PRE/M/J/20

ROSHANARA:	He was riding down Chandni Chowk. Apparently, at first there were just a few jeers, then a woman threw muck at him, then, before he could even respond, everybody joined in with stones, pots and, from the high-up windows, the contents of their latrines.	940
AURANGZEB: ROSHANARA:	And? Our soldiers beat back the crowd, then brought him to the royal guest house.	945
AURANGZEB: ROSHANARA: AURANGZEB:	He's here now? Yes. Release him.
	ROSHANARA smiles in understanding.
DANISHMAND: AURANGZEB:	Give him something for leading me to Dara then let him loose, without guards, without soldiers. Unprotected, Your Majesty, the crowd will kill him They want meat so give them meat, it might assuage their hysterics.	950
	ROSHANARA leaves.	955
	The man betrayed his benefactor, it would not be long before he deceived us too. Now, to the matter in hand, my brother in our dungeons. Anyone?
	AURANGZEB ascends to the Peacock Throne, sitting metres above his men.	960
DANISHMAND: AURANGZEB: DANISHMAND:	Your Majesty, Prince Dara has met his fate. Your point, Danishmand? His whole life he expected to succeed your father, even before Shah Jahan made him Crown Prince it was clear that Dara	0.05
AURANGZEB: DANISHMAND:	would accede. Go on. He felt it was his, the Empire. And then, despite all your father's extra soldiers, you defeated him.	965
AURANGZEB: DANISHMAND:	God was on our side. But from his position, he had the base materials, he was	970
SHAISTA KHAN:	brave He wasn't practised. [To AURANGZEB.] You, Sire, went on campaign after campaign, Dara stayed home and read.
DANISHMAND:	[To DANISHMAND.] Like you. A philosopher, yes.	975
	AURANGZEB is losing patience with DANISHMAND.
AURANGZEB:	Your notions are fascinating, Danishmand, but progress your
DANISHMAND:	point. Apologies, Sire, I know I can be circuitous. What I'm saying is, for Dara to have lost is enough, ample humiliation. Therefore, I propose Gwalior prison, let him sit and read in the dark for the rost of his days.	980
AURANGZEB:	rest of his days. And what do you say to the fact that my father spared none of his brothers at succession?

DANISHMAND:	Was it necessary? All his predecessors, no less vehement in pursuit of the throne, stopped short of killing. Your religion, Sire, your mercy, and your bloodline, call for sparing your	985
MIR KHALIL: AURANGZEB: MIR KHALIL:	brother's life. Your Holy Majesty, may I speak? Speak Khalil. You struggled hard for rights within this family, and look at it now. Sixty days on a camel's back to cross your Empire, Sire, from the Deccan to Kashmir, from Bengal to the Punjab, everything is yours. Your father wasted resources on opulent	990
AURANGZEB: MIR KHALIL:	monuments but you, Sire, will expand and consolidate this Empire. Don't flatter me, cousin. I wouldn't, cousin.	995
	AURANGZEB addresses all his councillors.
AURANGZEB:	Don't be so salty that I have to spit you out, nor so cloying that I choke on you.	1000
MIR KHALIL:	All I'm meaning is that nothing should hold you back. So long as Prince Dara lives, in or out of prison, he could incite mutiny. Sire, I think that killing him would be conducive to the common good.	1005
	Taking their cue from AURANGZEB's interest, the others are attentive to MIR KHALIL's speech.	1000
AURANGZEB: SHAISTA KHAN:	Shaista Khan? Perhaps. Prince Dara will be a hanging sword while he lives. Murad is no threat, he can waste in prison for as long as it takes, but Dara? Dara inspires love, and love, as we know, is dangerous.	1010
	AURANGZEB doesn't like this.
	They are beguiled, of course, his followers, but they are numerous. Were he in a cell next to Murad, whenever there was a law the dissenters didn't like they'd riot outside the prison, so I do agree with everything Mir Khalil says, with one exception. We cannot just kill Dara. If he had died in the war,	1015
AURANGZEB: SHAISTA KHAN:	all well and good, but he did not. The crowds have seen and screamed for him. He is a threat to my rule. Beheading a popular rebel makes us feel safe, temporarily. If you'd killed him in battle the question, 'How would it be	1020 were Dara Emperor?' would not prevail, but execute him as a political prisoner and that question will fill people's minds for the length of your lifetime. It could even inspire rebellion in the unconquered regions.	1025
AURANGZEB: SHAISTA KHAN:	How do we quell such doubts? If you would allow Mullah Farooq to speak, I think there may
AURANGZEB MULLAH FAROOQ:	yet be a third way. [to MULLAH FAROOQ]: Your thoughts, revered Mawlana. Your Majesty, you are the highest embodiment of knowledge on religion and warfare	1030
AURANGZEB:	Not over-salty nor too sugary

1035 MULLAH FAROOQ: You have defeated Dara - politically he is isolated, the governors and gentry are with you, physically he is imprisoned yet there is a piece of ground where he remains undefeated. AURANGZEB: Which around? MULLAH FAROOQ: The high ground, he is morally strong. He has spent time developing his mind, and his search for the commonality 1040 between people can make him seem, saintly. Saintly? His laissez-faire attitude sickens me. AURANGZEB: MULLAH FAROOQ: Unfortunately, however, people adore him. Even a small faction of the aristocracy! As Governor Khan iterated, were Dara to be assassinated as a political rebel, he would certainly die a 1045 luminary and that, you cannot afford, Sire. AURANGZEB: Agreed. Therefore it is not just his physical form that must perish, but MULLAH FAROOQ: also his mythology. Beat. 1050 AURANGZEB: How? MULLAH FAROOQ: Were it proven that Dara defied, not only a brother, but flouted God himself, an Islamic ruler would be invoked to take serious action. AURANGZEB: Though the Quran advises us not to sever ourselves from our 1055 family? MULLAH FAROOQ: The greater divine injunction would speak to Dara's desertion of Islam, were it proved that he no longer upheld Islam's supremacy and could therefore be called – an infidel. Beat. 1060 AURANGZEB: Mullah, how much evidence is there for such an accusation? MULLAH FAROOQ: I have been gathering particulars, your honour. My administrators have prepared a file on Dara's religious eccentricities. AURANGZEB: I appreciate your careful attention, Mullah Faroog. 1065 [To MIR KHALIL.] Make a public announcement, Prince Dara will be tried for apostasy. His AIDES are surprised at the suddenness of this decision. I have been exalted to this position because our Lord, who raises the meek and abases the haughty, determined it should 1070 be so. And remember, all of you, at all times, that God made me Emperor because I defend his word. Gentlemen, you are dismissed.
