When Marie was fourteen, her French teacher, Monsieur Laval, organised a trip to France for her class. Most of the pupils had never been abroad and it would be a new experience for them. They would leave at the beginning of July.

The teacher decided to take them to Grenoble. They would travel by plane because it is faster than the train. The town is well situated near the mountains and there are many things to see and to do.

The flight went well but on arriving, Pierre, one of Marie's friends, could not see his suitcase. He was very worried but his teacher soon found it and they all got on the coach to go to the hotel.

During their stay, they visited some interesting places. They admired the magnificent museums and the elegant shops. After choosing several presents for her friends, Marie put them in her bag and went to meet the others.

On the last day, Monsieur Laval arranged an excursion in the country where they went for a long walk. As the weather was very good everyone enjoyed themselves. Marie thought that the visit had been marvellous. She will return to the Alps one day.
