Introduction

The main aim of this booklet is to exemplify standards for those teaching Cambridge O Level Travel and Tourism (7096), and to show how different levels of candidates' performance (high, middle and low) relate to the subject's curriculum and assessment objectives.

In this booklet candidate responses have been chosen to exemplify a range of answers. Each response is accompanied by a brief commentary explaining the strengths and weaknesses of the answers.

Each response is annotated with clear explanation of where and why marks were awarded or omitted. This, in turn, is followed by examiner comments on how the answer could have been improved. In this way it is possible for you to understand what candidates have done to gain their marks and what they will have to do to improve their answers. At the end there is a list of common mistakes candidates made in their answers for each question.

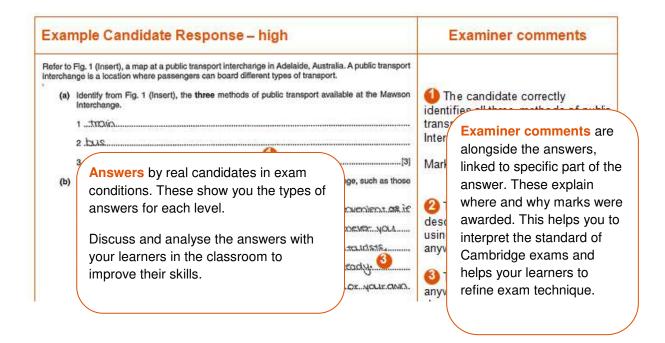

This document provides illustrative examples of candidate work. These help teachers to assess the standard required to achieve marks, beyond the guidance of the mark scheme. Some question types where the answer is clear from the mark scheme, such as short answers and multiple choice, have therefore been omitted.

The questions, mark schemes and pre-release material used here are available to download from Teacher Support. These files are:

- (d) The candidate over-explained their answer to 1 and could have improved by being more concise.
- (e) This response was mostly descriptive, with some elements of weak analysis. The candidate needed to develop their response more by analysing and evaluating more fully how the organisation and/or customer would benefit from dealing with complaints effectively.

How the candidate could have improved the answer

- (c) The candidate needed to be more specific for point 1, for example, 'build ring roads'. To improve points 2 and 3, the candidate should have kept their answer focused on the question. For point 2, the candidate needed to state exactly how they would have limited numbers of people and ensured that their response was relevant, for example, alternate-day travel. Again, point 3 needed to be more specific, stating and explaining a specific strategy.
- (d) All the points given here needed to be more specific and more focused on the question about avoiding congestion at the entrances to visitor attractions.
- (e) The candidate should have provided fuller evaluation of the benefits to an attraction of dealing with customer complaints. This would have earned the response a full 6 marks (Level 3).

- 2 The candidate does not answer the question. The response describes the benefits of public transport, not a public transport interchange.
- The candidate's response is vague ('explore more') and not specific to an interchange.

How the candidate could have improved the answer

- (b) This question required candidates to describe the benefits of a public transport interchange, not public transport in general, as described here.
- (c) The candidate needed to be more specific and relevant to the question (large city destinations and reducing congestion and overcrowding). Point 2 could have been improved by making it more specific and using the correct terminology, e.g. pedestrianizing. Point 3 suggested a way that cannot be controlled by a large city/destination and is therefore not relevant.
- (d) The response given was not relevant to the question. Carrying Capacity is determined by many factors, many of which are not controllable by the attraction, e.g. fire and safety limits. Similarly, adherence to Carrying Capacity does not reduce congestion at entrances, which was the subject of the question.
- (e) The response was well structured and developed. However, the candidate also needed to evaluate or conclude how methods of dealing with complaints would contribute towards a successful future for an attraction.

Common mistakes candidates made in this question

Many candidates did not focus their answers closely enough on the questions. Identifying the context more accurately when reading the questions would have helped candidates to be focused and specific in their responses. Candidates could highlight/underline the specific context when reading the question in order to do this.

Not using correct and specific terminology was also a common mistake.

In this question and overall in the paper, there was a lack of focused evaluation in questions requiring longer answers.

How the candidate could have improved the answer

- (b) The candidate needed more thorough knowledge of climatic conditions and seasons.
- (c) The candidate needed to keep the whole of their answer focused on the question. They included some valid explanation; however, most of the response was not relevant to the trend of Jamaica having become a popular tourist destination attracting 1.5 million visitors from the USA and Canada.
- (d) The candidate's response for point 1 was not valid, as development is not a function of a tourist board. To improve response 2, the candidate needed to explain how or why a website could promote Jamaica, mentioning its benefits in terms of content and information.
- (e) The candidate needed to be more specific to earn higher marks. The first half of the response is not creditworthy as it does not answer the question. If a more specific example had been given, this could have been avoided. The candidate could have assessed the characteristics of the cultural performances, for example. Although the analysis at the end is similar to the analysis shown in the high response example, the analysis marks were limited due to the vaguely referenced example. This highlights the need to give accurate and specific examples when the question requires it.

How the candidate could have improved the answer

- (b) The candidate needed more thorough knowledge of climatic conditions and seasons.
- (c) For response 1, the candidate needed to keep their answer focused specifically on the question. For response 2, the candidate again needed to keep their answer focused on the question. The candidate does not explain how its climate has influenced the trend of Jamaica being a popular tourist destination regularly attracting 1.5 million visitors from the USA and Canada. For response 3, the candidate needed to explain how the fact that Jamaica is an LEDC makes travel to and around Jamaica cheap for tourists from MEDCs such as USA and Canada.
- (d) The candidate's response for 1 needed to be more specific with further development explaining how this method would help JTB to fulfil their role. The candidate also needed to use the correct terminology.
- (e) The candidate needed to develop their chosen example more to analyse exactly how the cultural performance appeals to tourists. The command word in the question indicated what was required. The candidate needed to do more than give a simple explanation or description of the cultural performance. They then needed to evaluate the points raised, possibly offering some conclusion. As seen with the previous examples, one obvious evaluative point is to make a link with the effect on the host population, e.g. responsible tourism, or economic and social advantages and disadvantages.

How the candidate could have improved the answer

- (b) In this response, it is the combination of elements that has given the candidate the full 2 marks available. However, in general, candidates are advised to be more concise.
- (c) For response 2, the candidate needed to provide more explanation of the advantage to passengers in order to be awarded the second mark, for example passengers are able to visit two destinations in one trip for the same price, thereby saving money. Point 3 is worded badly unfortunately and needed a more specific explanation to make it correct. It is not true that replacement flights are easier to find only in hub airports. The candidate also needed to make it clearer which flights they are talking about here: the initial flight from the home departure airport (not relevant to the question) or the onward flight departing from a hub airport (relevant)?
- (d) The training methods are well explained. However, response 2 (customer service) and 3 (mathematics and calculations) could have been more concise, saving valuable exam time for more challenging questions and topic areas.
- (e) The candidate would have benefited from planning the structure of their response before starting. It was not until line 9 that any creditworthy comment was made, instead the candidate explained cheap flights, which was not what the question required. Simple planning of the response will help the candidate to focus and be more concise, allowing space and time for analysis and evaluation. Candidates should plan the longer answer questions in three parts: identify, analyse and evaluate/conclude. Centres can refer to the mark schemes for more detail on how 'assess and discuss' questions are marked.

How the candidate could have improved the answer

- (a) The source material and question have been incorrectly interpreted. Candidates need to be sure what the question is asking before identifying information from figures.
- (b) For response 1, the candidate needed to be more specific. W i-fi is now a common feature in all classes of scheduled airlines. The candidate needed to state a feature of this wi-fi that is specific or exclusive to business class travel, e.g. free wi-fi or a higher download speed. Although the description is valid, a correct identification needs to be present to qualify for the second description mark.

Response 2 was awarded a benefit-of-the-doubt mark. Candidates should be as specific as possible to ensure that their meaning is clearly conveyed. In this case, the candidate would have improved their response by including airport lounge and to take a rest in before a flight.

- (c) Response 1 was too vague and needed to explain what is easier and faster to make it relevant to the question. Point 2 also needed to be more specific to gain the second explanatory mark, explaining precisely how a passenger will benefit, e.g. from duty-free prices or exclusive products before their onward journey. Response 3 needed to be more specific and relevant to the question.
- (d) The explanation for training method 2 could have been improved by being made more specific and direct and using the correct terminology (satisfied and valued customer) rather than 'feel like a king'.
- (e) The candidate could have improved their response by stating a precise use of the Internet, e.g. website, pop-up, advert, etc. The candidate successfully identified three promotional methods; however marks were limited to the top of Level 1 as there was no analysis. The response could have been improved by analysing the promotional methods in the context of a travel agent rather than merely describing them.

How the candidate could have improved the answer

- (a) The candidate misunderstood this question. Candidates are advised to read questions carefully to ensure that they extract the correct information from figures.
- (b) For response 1, the candidate needed to develop their description, for example describing the benefit to the customer of the feature.
- (c) All three responses were too vague; the candidate needed to provide clear focus on the question in all their responses. In this case, the question asked for the advantages to passengers of using hub airports for international journeys.
- (d) The candidate needed to be specific about each type of training, stating the overall type rather than giving one aspect of the content. For example, facial expressions would form part of body language training. When explaining the benefits to customers, candidates were advised to focus on the positives rather than what could go wrong if the training was not in place. It is therefore better to say staff know how to be polite and respectful towards the customer rather than customers will think it's disrespectful.
- (e) The candidate should have read the question more carefully to ensure that they were answering with the right focus. In this case, the candidate needed to identify, analyse and evaluate methods of promotion used by travel agencies.

How the candidate could have improved the answer

- (a) The candidate needed to be more specific when naming tourist types, although they have been given the benefit of the doubt here. Candidates are advised to be precise and use the correct terminology.
- (b) In response 1, the candidate has misinterpreted the question and is describing the climate not the vehicle.
- (c) Candidates are advised to carefully read questions, use the Fig in the insert where applicable and consider the context of the question before answering. In this part there were 2 elements of context that the candidate needs within their response, that of the vehicle and the climate.

In response 2 the response is vague; to improve this, the candidate needs to explain how exactly the vehicles are equipped to deal with the climate, for example transparent flaps to be used during a dust storm.

(d) All three points here would have benefited from being more concise. In response 1, the candidate described the need well, but it was not until the end of the answer that they actually included a valid way (skilifts). Candidates should state the way at the start so that the remainder of their response is focused and relevant and earns the full marks available.

In response 2, the candidate has identified a valid way but only included it at the end, leaving the remainder of the response unfocused and irrelevant, and losing any further marks.

Response 3 was too vague to be creditworthy; here the candidate should have identified a valid way (helicopter landing pad) which would have earned a mark.

(e) The candidate's response was unfocused at the start (first 7 lines) and merely described the destination. Candidates were not required simply to describe a destination but to discuss the range of shopping facilities in the destination. The response was awarded Level 2 marks for analysis, however the candidate lost focus towards the end. In order to achieve Level 3 marks the candidate needed to include relevant and focused evaluation and conclusions.

Paper 1

How the candidate could have improved the answer

- (a) This candidate was not precise enough, did not use the correct terminology and repeated their answers to 2 and 3.
- (b) Candidates are advised to use the figures as indicated in the questions. This candidate failed to use only the information from Fig. 4 in their answer for 2.
- (c) The candidate's response in point 1 was not developed; to improve, they needed to explain more about the impact they had identified, for example how exactly this had a positive effect. The answer in point 2 did not use the information in Fig. 4.
- (d) All three answers lacked relevance. The candidate needed to focus their answers on the question and to describe specific features, for example roads, footpaths, viewing platforms.
- (e) The candidate included some limited analysis; to improve they needed to analyse further the importance of the shopping facilities, rather than the destination, and then evaluate or draw a conclusion.

Common mistakes candidates made in this question

Candidates should have used the information in Fig. 4 correctly and followed the instructions in the questions more carefully. Practice with past papers would help with this.
